

Sai Bharadwaj @ Workspace...

Who says I am unemployed? The more I am into web...the more I am able to earn and survive on my own. There were questions raised after my graduation whether I will ever get a job after a few interview failures but, when there is a job online which I can do and earn more than offline, why should I ever join in some other company? The only reason I should join a company is to stay away from home..just that I can't sit at home 24 hours a day. looks a bit awkward! ;)

My Work place has everything that is needed for a employee.

- Good Atmosphere With Air Conditioned Room
- Ability to research online incase I am not able to get my work done
- I don't need to be perfect to get my things done. If I am not able to do, I hire someone else and make him do my clients work along with me...in this way, I don't loose the deal and the things get done.
- 24 Hour Internet Access, Proper Food made by mom. hehe
- No fixed timing. I can work according to requirement and not necessarily divert my fun to get the things done. for example, if I need to watch a cricket match...I can watch the cricket on TV & start my work in the late nights. This facility is not available in Corporate Boxes.

What I miss ?

- Social Networking: I am the only one who stays here and no interaction with anyone else except the online buddies. So, the social interaction misses at times.
- Girls: You get to have lots of girls around you if you are in a office. Thats not possible at my work space.
- Development & Professionalism: I don't need to dress myself like a professional to start working, I can start working with shorts, without taking bath and sometimes even with brush in my mouth.

In Future:

- In the near future, you will see me allocating time to online activities as I will join in some company shortly.
- The reason for me to join a company is not for the salary (or) development portfolio..but, to stay in a working environment. I can't sit at home every day and work from home. Isn't it?
